

PERSPECTIVES ON CONTEMPORARY LEGEND, 2022

SECOND CONFERENCE UPDATE

by Gail de Vos on June 7, 2022

Ian and I are looking forward to you arriving at the conference site (see above) in just over a month. The conference program should be distributed in the next day or so. I will be sending out links to the menu options for those of you who have indicated that you are joining us on Monday, July 11 at the Mill Street Pub. Please fill out a separate form for yourself and your guest if you are bringing someone to enjoy our legendary hospitality.

It is not too late to take advantage of the opportunity to visit the Mill Street Pub, an historic building (by Canadian time, not necessarily European history). Just let me know before the end of this week (June 11) and I will add you to the list and send you the menu form.

A couple of housekeeping items:

- When you register you will receive a lanyard which gives you access to the conference and to the two museums (Canadian Museum of History and Canadian War Museum). The power of the lanyard is not to be taken lightly!
- Lunches will be on your own each day except for Wednesday, the day of the excursion when we will be providing you with a boxed lunch (menu options for the box lunch to be forthcoming), and Friday when we will be ending early afternoon. We are arranging small nutrition breaks for most mornings and for the two longer afternoons.
- Our excursion starts at 1:15 from the hotel across the street from the conference site. We, hopefully, have allowed enough time for you to drop off your conference personal and put on your tourist garments before we head out to explore our capital city in all its splendor.
- For those of you who are interested in ghost tours, Ottawa has at least two available for your pleasure, but we will not be participating in the tours as a group.
- This conference is the first time ISCLR is attempting a hybrid format with some papers and even more participants online. Please have patience with the technology issues if (not when!) they may arise.
